Letter

PJ, My doctor is a real rough type sports doctor, he reminds me of our football teams doctor in high school. I really like him a lot, but I do not know him well at all. I have several people I know reading the book now and my clients are easy because of our relationship but this would be my first cold sell.

In between a discussion about personal medical issues and his embarrassing explanation he starts chuckling when I begin to joke with him by motioning with my hands and saying “shhhhhhh--the walls are thin and there are nurses running around”.

After his funny bone was tickled there was a pause of silence and I sensed the moment was now : so I struck!

“So are you an audio book guy or a paper book guy.” I blurted out. He said, he had thought about the audio books. I just don’t have time to read anything enjoyable anymore since I have to constantly read medical junk. I told him that I had just finished a fascinating fiction thriller and that it may have been best book I have ever heard. I asked him if he would like to borrow my copy and that I had it out in the car.

My heart was singing a victory song as he said,

“yes, go get that audio book out of your car, I want to check it out.”

John, your ABSOLUTELY correct, easiest cold sell I have EVER done. It was sooooo easy and smooth that in my next conversation with the lab worker I was sick to my stomach that I only had one copy. After our small moment of pleasant dialogue I am 100% confident she would have been eager to take one home as well

All you do is have your name and phone number on the audio cd and have a way to follow up, as with my doctor, I have a follow up appointment in three weeks and will hopefully share good news about it. I'm going to get that lab worker too next time! OH MY GOODNESS, I AM SO EXCITED!!!

I haven't had this much joy and zeal since I first became a Christian 20 years ago. When I first got saved, I was so on fire for Jesus that I would stop people in the street to ask them if they knew Jesus. Of course, my clumsy approach turned people off and I learned to bury my desire to see everyone come to know the Lord.

Now it is back!!!!

And this time I can use wisdom and graciousness to actually reach people for Jesus.

Thank you so much!
